

The Employees Mentor shows you how to make the most of your first years of full-time employment. It can also be of help to employees at any phase in their careers. Topics include preparing for a performance evaluation, handling manager assigned tasks, managing your manager, conflict management, communication skills, and much more. Most topics are supplemented with true stories from the authors own business career. The author, Richard LaPalme, created and ran Spalding Sporting Goods entry-level IT training program in the early 1980s. There, he began mentoring young employees on how to successfully transition from academia to the work world. Richard continued mentoring employees in various contexts throughout the remainder of his twenty-seven year career at Farm Credit Banks and Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company.
